Soil Conservation Meetings Carded for Hempstead Co.

200 Attend First of Series at the Spring Hill Community

VOTE NOVEMBER 19

Six Meetings Are to Be Held in the County Next Week

More than 200 farm folks attended a meeting relative to the referendum on the proposed Terre Rouge-Bodewaw Soil Conservation district at Spring Hill school Wednesday night. The meeting was in charge of Frank Hill, president of the Spring Hill community farm bureau.

The agricultural workers of Hempstead county of which George Ware, assistant director of the Fruit and Truck Experiment Station is chairman, made arrangements.

Oliver L. Adams, county agent, and Donald Poe, conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service, discussed soil conservation districts and the referendum which will be held in Hempstead, Nevada, and LaFayette counties on Saturday, November 19th.

The Spring Hill meeting was the first of a series of 8 meetings to be held in Hempstead county this week and next. The second meeting was held at DeAnn Thursday night with the assistance of the DeAnn Community Farm Bureau.

Series of Meetings

Other meeting to be held next week are:

Blevins on Monday night, Patmos on Tuesday night, Guernsey on Wednesday night, Washington on Thursday night, Bingen on Friday night and Hope in the city hall, Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

A quartet and string band from the CCC furnished several numbers. Talking pictures showing the damages of erosion and means of combating erosion were presented. The State Soil Conservation committee has given notice of referendum on creation of proposed Terre Rouge-Bodewaw Soil Conservation district, embracing lands lying in Hempstead, Nevada, and LaFayette counties, Arkansas.

For the purpose of the said referendum, voting places will be opened at:

Jews Given Warning

BERLIN, Germany.—(P)—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels Friday warned Jews outside of Germany that their behavior as well as that of German Jews, would determine the future treatment of Jews in the Reich.

He said that new restrictive laws and decrees were being prepared, and would be issued within the next few days.

Speaking 45 minutes to the foreign press, Goebbels said Thursday's anti-Jewish outbreak which vented itself in burning, dynamiting synagogues, and destruction of Jewish shops, was spontaneous.

WASHINGTON.—(P)—The International Ladies Garment Workers union, one of the founders of the CIO, decided Friday not to affiliate with the permanent CIO organization which is to be formed in Pittsburgh next week.

World Pauses for Armistice Events

Roosevelt Gives Nation's Homage to Unknown Soldier

By the Associated Press

Twenty years after the end of the World war, an anxious world paused Friday to reflect peace and disillusionment.

The new generation, with only dim memories or none at all of the World war and the great joy of November 11, 1918, already have grown to fighting age.

The new generation comes to maturity through years of struggle against devastation of the past war, amid new wars, preparation for more wars, amid weakened democracies and growing power of dictatorships.

President Roosevelt gave the nation's homage to the unknown soldier who rests on a rolling hillside in Arlington cemetery.

Youth Killed in Fall From Truck

Loy Veazey, 18, Meets Instant Death Near Sheridan

SHERIDAN, Ark.—Loy Veazey, 18, who lived near Sheridan was killed almost instantly Thursday when he fell from a log truck driven by M. C. Caruthers. A heavy wheel passed over his chest and head.

Both men were employees of Jewel Harrison, Sheridan timber man and owner of the truck.

Caruthers told officers that he and Veazey were told they would not work Thursday, and that he started for home driving the truck. About two blocks from the J. L. Williams filling station he passed over something. Stopping to investigate, he found that he had passed over Veazey. He did not know the youth had caught his truck.

School children said they saw Veazey run to catch the truck, and that he was attempting to climb into the cab when he fell. Other witnesses said the accident was unavoidable.

Veazey is survived by his mother, Mrs. Jettie Veazey of Sheridan, two brothers, Clarence and Butler Veazey of Sheridan and four sisters, Mrs. Frank Chandler of Pine Bluff, Mrs. Morris Duncan of Illinois and Mrs. Dyer Emmett and Mrs. Winifred McGrity of Sheridan.

Funeral services will be held at the Methodist church here at 3:30 p. m. Friday by the Rev. B. F. Roebuck.

Presbyterian Body Selects Hot Springs

Annual Meeting of Auxiliary to Be Held in Spa Next Year

WARREN, Ark.—The 27th annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary, Synod of Arkansas, closed here Thursday. The following officers were installed by Dr. Bruce C. Boney: Mrs. W. N. Trulock Jr., Pine Bluff, vice president at large; Mrs. Paul Nichols, Pine Bluff, recording secretary; Mrs. D. C. Harris, Warren, secretary of synodical and Presbyterian home missions; and Mrs. C. L. Woods of Fort Smith, secretary of synodical and Presbyterian assembly home missions.

Hot Springs was chosen as the site for the 1939 meeting.

Dr. Boney led the devotional and spoke on "The Influence of the Christian Home in the Church of the Nation."

Mrs. David McMillan of Arkadelphia synodical president, spoke on "The Year Ahead." Dr. Boney sang.

Wheel Chair Tourist Does Thirty a Day

PALESTINE, Tex.—(P)—Jim Britton, 54, is gaining a reputation as the "wheel chair tourist."

Recently he made a trip from Palestine to Houston and return, a distance of 600 miles. He averaged 30 miles a day and his best day's "run" was 40 miles.

Britton paid the trip's cost by selling small articles along the way.

FDR PLANS SHAKE-UP

"Dad's Day Celebration" for Final Home Game

Parents Will Be Honored at Game On Friday Night

Prescott-Hope Grid Contest Will Begin at 8 o'Clock

BOTH TEAMS READY

No Injuries Reported on Either Team—Expect Big Crowd

Fathers and mothers of members of the Hope High School football team will be honored at the Hope-Prescott football game here Friday night in a "Dad's Day Celebration."

The group will sit inside the railing and near the player's bench during the last home game for the Hope squad. They will wear numerals corresponding with those worn by the players, their sons.

The program at the half will be dedicated to the parents of players.

Fathers of players will be introduced individually to the audience. The Hope High School band will participate in the program.

Teams Ready for Game

Both the Hope and Prescott squads will be near top form for the game which will start promptly at 8 o'clock. Three Hope players will be making their final home appearance. They are Captain Dean Parsons, quarterback; Jack Fulkerson, end; and Guard Jimmy Taylor. All will graduate next spring.

The Bobcats, favored to win, will carry a slight weight advantage. The Prescott team is coached by O. H. Storey, former Jonesboro A. & M. star. He uses the Notre Dame system.

A large number of fans from Prescott are expected to witness the game. Hope followers also are expected to turn out for the final appearance of the 1938 squad at home.

The Starting Lineups

In the probable starting lineup for Hope will be the following: Ends—Fulkerson and Turner; Tackle—Green and Simpson; Guards—J. Taylor and Quimby; Quarterback—Parsons; Halfbacks—Coleman and Baker; Fullback—Eason.

20 Years After Armistice, Arms Race Is Costing 6 Times as Much as Before War

Accident Victim Remains Critical

Little Change Noted in the Condition of Luther Jones

Luther Jones, 35-year-old manager of the Temple Cotton Oil company plant at Nashville, remained in a critical condition at Julia Chester hospital Friday.

Atlaheas said he spent a "restless and uncomfortable" night and saw but little change in his general condition.

X-ray photographs Friday showed that he sustained a punctured lung, several fractured ribs, besides severe scalp lacerations.

Mr. Jones was injured Wednesday night when the car he was driving left the paved highway seven miles west of Hope and plunged down an embankment, turning over several times.

Mr. Jones was driving alone at the time.

U.S. Is Arming as Rapidly as Any Other Section of World

Army and Navy Vastly Expanded Since Before 1914—World Arms Bill Running 14 to 18 Billions a Year

This is the last of five articles reviewing the historic 20 years since the Armistice.

By WILLIS THORNTON, NEA Service Staff Correspondent

Before the World war there were plenty of boys who had grown up in the United States without ever having seen a soldier.

Which shows the pre-war innocence of a country which is now being forced into a prospective military budget of $1,300,000,000 for 1940. Of course the annual half-billion for veterans, and about 50,000 of them available for a striking force. The navy had 50,000. The War Department that year cost $168,000,000, the navy $140,233,000.

Today the regular army has 165,000. Instead of the 110,000 members of loosely-organized state militias, there are 200,000 well-trained and equipped national guardsmen, for war purposes also a federal force. Plans are under way for an enlisted reserve of 75,000, and there are today about 90,000 reserve officers, each ready at a moment's notice to step into his appointed place in the war machine.

Navy personnel is now about 105,000, but will be 120,000 as fast as new vessels are ready.

That will be just as fast as the President's $800,000,000 naval building program can get them finished.

Everybody's War

Complete re-arming and modernization of the army is under way, each infantryman to carry the Garand semi-automatic rifle (100 shots a minute) instead of the 1903 Springfield (10 shots a minute). Tanks, anti-tank guns, and anti-aircraft batteries are being rushed into production, as the United States has few of any types.

Air defense enthusiasts are demanding an air force three and four times the present one, which includes something over 3000 army and navy planes. They argue that recent European developments show that the U. S. Air Force is behind the times technically and negligible in size.

The World war made certain that another war will be a "total war." That is, every person, every resource, every energy, every thought, must be concentrated on winning. Everything becomes a part of the war machine, no opposition, no debate, no private ends, no withholding, can be tolerated.

That is war today, and scarcely a person doubts it. Measures already introduced in the U. S. Congress would give the President practically dictatorial power if war comes. Yet little objection is heard, for since the World war, that is what war means.

Howard and Miller Favor Courthouses

Miller Building Tax Carries by Margin of 74 Votes

New courthouses for Howard and Miller counties were given approval in Tuesday's general election.

In Miller county the tax vote carried by a slight margin of 74 votes. This was the official count which has been certified to the secretary of state.

Returns from 21 of 34 precincts in Howard county showed the unofficial vote of 788 to 436 in favor of construction of a new courthouse.

Election commissioners in Hempstead county were scheduled to canvass the official returns Friday. The unofficial vote gave approval of the courthouse building tax by about 4 to 1.

They Got the Calf Home Finally, But It Arrived in Sections

By WINNIE SPARKS

There are more ways of getting a bought calf home than by driving him or trucking him home, according to Milan Green, of Ozan.

On a recent afternoon Green went to a negro cabin a few miles east of Ozan to get a calf which he had bought from the negro. When he had driven the calf only a short distance, it refused to go another step. No persuasion, gentle or brutal, could make it move forward.

Green, thoroughly disgusted with his purchase, offered to sell it on the spot to any buyer who would have it for the price he paid for it, but no one seemed to want to buy the stubborn calf. It was a long walk to town, and Green had no truck of his own, but he had some friends.

So, he barbecued the calf on the spot from which it refused to move, and gave a barbecue supper for a group of his friends and relatives. Thus, the calf was safely conveyed home, not to one home but several homes.

Amendment 30 (for elective Board of Education):

As Thursday's returns brought the votes accounted for from about 83,000 to about 103,000, majorities against Act 8 and Amendment 30 were increased slightly, while the majority against Act 1 was reduced more than 1,000 votes.

(The additional votes indicated that Amendments 26 (poll tax elimination) and 28 (refunding) were defeated overwhelmingly and beyond doubt.

New Appointments to High Office to Be Announced Soon

Two of Cabinet Members May Resign Within Week

REVIEWS ELECTION

Says Results Not Threat to Continued Liberal Government

WASHINGTON.—(P)—President Roosevelt said Friday that he soon would announce a number of appointments, probably within a week.

Asked at a press conference whether Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan, defeated Tuesday for re-election, was included on the list of new appointments, Roosevelt answered by saying that nobody was on the list yet.

The calm of the election aftermath brought renewed speculation that the chief executive first was contemplating a cabinet shake-up.

There has been recurrent rumors that two or more members might resign and be transferred to other posts. The speculation was based partly on the fact that presidents sometime make mid-term changes of their group of official advisers.

Among those mentioned as possibly involved were Secretaries Swanson of the Navy; Woodring of War; Roper of Commerce; and Postmaster Jim Farley.

Reviews Elections

Roosevelt said that he did not believe the results of last Tuesday's elections constituted any threat for the continuation of liberal government.

At a press conference, Mr. Roosevelt declared he thought the election results were all right.

At the same time he predicted he would not encounter what one of his questioners called "coalition opposition"—presumably combining republican and anti-New Deal democrats against administration proposals to congress.

Bottle Feeding Not Best for Infants If Natural Feeding Is Possible

Physicians both in this country and abroad are convinced that the refinement of life and social comfort have not tended to encourage mothers to feed their own babies. Indeed, the effects of our most complex civilization have been to the contrary.

As far back as the eighteenth century women of the nobility and women of fashion hired nurses to take care of the baby. In those days our modern methods of artificial feeding were unknown. Cow's milk was not a satisfactory substitute for mother's milk. If the mother failed to obtain a wet nurse, she either had to nurse the baby herself or permit the child to die.

Now we have learned so much about the feeding of babies that we have many alternatives. We not only have cow's milk in usable form together with feeding bottles and all the other artificial feeding, but also dried milk, condensed milk, and milk substitutes. Most physicians are convinced that artificial feeding should never be used if the mother's milk is satisfactory and if she can be persuaded to undertake the feeding of the child herself. Physicians are convinced that as good many are of the unnecessary deaths of infants could be prevented by getting more and more mothers to nurse their babies. Here is an example of the fact that unlimited funds will not always result in the right answer to problems in preventive medicine.

In different parts of the world the attitude toward this subject varies. In certain British communities it was found that from 75 to 85 per cent of mothers were nursing their babies at least during the first few months of life. Just as soon as the mother gets back to daily work, however, she begins to look forward to the time when her baby can be weaned.

In Edinburgh, it was found that 87 per cent of mothers were still feeding their babies on the fortieth day. In another British community it was found that 60 per cent of mothers were still feeding their babies at three months, but only 35 per cent at the age of six months.

In the United States, the figures seem to vary in different parts of the country, depending on the number of foreign born in the population, the financial status of the persons concerned, and other factors.

Among 20,000 babies listed in the infant welfare service Chicago only 48 per cent were entirely breast fed nine months. It seems possible that about 20 per cent of babies are artificially fed almost from the day of birth.

The figures from all over the world seem to show that breast fed babies are more free from disease and have a greater chance of recovery from disease than do artificially fed babies.

Dr. J. C. Spence feels that the question as to whether or not the mother shall nurse her baby is of the utmost importance to her mental state. He is convinced that there is psychological as well as physical value to the nursing process, and that the mother who nurses her own baby has a distinct sense of achievement. Therefore, this process has a definite value in maintaining the mental health of the mother.

Trade Wars of Dictators Affect All Workingmen

One of the things that makes it hard for Americans to figure out the right kind of foreign policy these days is the fact that they have always been great believers in the old virtue of minding their own business.

A cardinal point in the American creed is the belief that any people has a right to the kind of government it chooses, even if that government happens to be atrociously bad. So if the Germans, the Russians, the Italians or any other people feel like saddling themselves with governments which look like holdovers from the era of Genghis Khan, we have never felt called upon to do anything about it.

Up to now, that worked fine. For while the world had some fairly brutal and reactionary dictatorships in the old days, they mostly minded their own business too. They did try to grab up such loose bits of Asia and Africa as weren't nailed down, to be sure, but since we had no vital interests in those spots we could afford to be quite unconcerned.

But the picture now is different. The dictatorships are not merely on their muscles; they seem to be doing their very best to create the kind of world in which only dictatorships can survive.

First of all, they arm to the teeth—and brandish their arms about as recklessly as so many drunken two-gun men in a frontier saloon. They regard neither treaties nor international law; they openly say they are going to take what they want and that brute force is the only power they respect.

Yet that is only a starter. They meddle in the international affairs of their neighbors—meddle constantly, remorselessly and dangerously. They organize, finance and direct revolutionary movements inside of countries with which they are at peace. They try to control the activities of descendants of their own emigrants; no matter how far those people may be removed from any actual tie with the homeland. In every conceivable way they seek to implant their own ideas and their own standards on foreign soil.

On top of all this, they have introduced a new kind of commercial war to the world. Driving down their own living standards, they defy competition by nations which refuse to reduce their own living standards. They turn international trade into a struggle which creates poverty instead of wealth. They make their internal policies of low wages, long hours and small profits matters which directly affect worker and producers on the other side of the world.

Today's dictatorships are not in the least like the dictatorships of the past. In the old days we could ignore dictatorships, figuring that the world was large enough to contain repression and freedom side by side. Today it is extremely hard to take that attitude—and it is getting harder every day.

It may be that minding our own business will require us to take a very alert and intelligent interest in the kind of government our neighbors treat themselves to. If they insist on creating the kind of world in which a free society could not survive, they can hardly be surprised if we react accordingly.

There is only one trouble with John Masfield's new novel, "Dead Ned" (Macmillan, $2.50). It is the first half of a two-book yarn of mystery, adventure and high seas hell-raising, and it ends at such an agonizingly suspenseful moment that it is going to be very hard to wait for the second volume.

Mr. Masfield goes back to the England of a century and a quarter ago for his setting, and introduces a young student-doctor who gets wrongly accused of murder. The young man is tried, convicted and sentenced to be hanged. In fact, he actually is hanged. But that isn't the end of him.

Hanging in those days was apparently a fairly slipshod procedure. A doctor who knew his business not infrequently restore life to a hanged man, if he could get hold of him right after the ceremony; and Mr. Masfield's young hero is so restored. And then the fun begins.

He dare not show his face in England, for if he is recognized he will be taken back and hanged again—this time, permanently. So he ships for Africa on a slave ship, with the suspicious minions of the law hot on his trail, a half-mad murderer for a skipper, a mutinous crew, and on the horizon a still-to-be-solved mystery about a civilized African tribe that is trying to break up the slave trade. And right there this book ends.

Nobody can tell a tale of this kind more persuasively than Mr. Masfield. If the sequel is half as good as the beginning, the two books together ought to be a three-star special. Here's hoping Mr. Masfield hurries up with that second volume.

In Memoriam

They went with song to battle—they were young, straight of limb, true of eye, sturdy and glow. They were staunch to the end against odds uncounted, And they fell with their faces to the foe.

They shall not grow old as we that are left grow old, Age shall not weary them nor the years condemn. At the going down of the sun and in the morning We shall remember them.—Selected.

Peace does not mean the end of all of our striving, Joy does not mean the drying of our tears.

Peace is the power that comes to souls arriving, Up to the light where God himself appears.—Selected.

The Sacredness of Human Life
Text: Exodus 20:13; Matthew 5:21-26, 38-42

If one were to judge the importance of a lesson by the need of it in the world surrounding us, there could surely be no more important lesson than this. Of only in our generation has there been killing on a large scale, in which almost all nations have been engaged, but out of all this welter of war and violence there has emerged a hard and cynical temper in which the destruction of life seems increasingly carelessly regarded.

The Jews gave to the world, through the Commandments and through the early pages of the Old Testament, supreme witness concerning the sacredness of human life. The Commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," was a codifying of the teaching of the story of Cain and Abel, with its dramatic emphasis upon the evil, the loss, and the consequences of the taking of human life. It is appalling to realize that the world has made so little progress since that time in the recognition of human rights and human values.

What is strange, also, is the wide discrepancy between the life-saving forces on the one hand today and the life-destroying forces on the other hand. What care we take in scientific ways to safeguard the lives of children from earliest infancy! How much concern we show about the prevention of disease and the lengthening of human life! And yet, with all that we are doing by scientific methods and in the humanitarian spirit, all these saving and upbuilding agencies are overwhelmed by the destruction which continues through war and strife, and the ruthless disregard of human values in the quest of speed, both on the highways and in industry.

It is difficult to make our modern America realize that in times of peace we have a casualty list from automobile accidents and other preventable accidents that makes the statistics of fatality even higher than those in the wars in which America has been engaged.

When we all the community realize these things, and, facing the facts, put a proper value upon human life and all that safeguards and protects, it not only in some few respects, but in each and every respect? Our lesson, too, emphasizes the fact that killing and murder are not simply matters of the taking of life. They have their roots and their incentives in wrong attitudes, in prejudice and hate, and in all unbrotherly ways and conduct. It is not enough in modern society to refrain from killing; we can fulfill the spirit of the Commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," only as we live in positive terms of peace and brotherhood, and as we promote in every way harmonious relations of man with man.

Malvern Minister to Preach Sunday

Rev. C. H. Asher to Have Charge of Services at Tabernacle

The Rev. C. H. Asher of Malvern will speak Sunday morning at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle at the 11 o'clock worship service and again at the evening evangelistic service beginning at 7:45 according to an announcement made by Pastor Bert Webb who is in Tulsa, Okla., conducting a revival campaign in Faith Tabernacle of that city. Unusual interest has made it necessary for the meeting in Tulsa to continue over Sunday.

The Rev. Mr. Asher needs no introduction to people of Hope, having been at the local Tabernacle several months ago for a week of meetings during which it was unanimously declared that he was one of the outstanding ministers to appear in the Tabernacle pulpit. Large crowds are expected to hear him at both services next Sunday.

The general public is invited to be present. Rev. and Mrs. Webb will return to Hope on Monday of next week.

NEWS of the CHURCHES

GARRETT MEMORIAL BAPTIST
Hollis Purdie, Pastor

Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. Preaching at 11 a. m. by pastor. B. Y. P. T. C. meets at 6:45. Preaching at 7:45. Ladies auxiliary meets at the home of Mrs. Mont Allen Monday at 2:30. We will have night services next week. Bro. Hollis Purdie will preach. Services start at 7:30. Everybody come and worship with us.

HOPE GOSPEL TABERNACLE
Bert Webb, Pastor

Rev. C. H. Asher of Malvern will speak at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle next Sunday at both the services due to the fact that Pastor and Mrs. Webb have felt it necessary to stay over in Tulsa for one more Sunday in the campaign they are conducting in Faith Tabernacle of that city. Unusual interest and results are noticeable in the Tulsa meeting. Sunday school with classes for all meets at 9:45 and everyone is urged to be present. Christ's Ambassadors and Children's Church meet at 6:45. Spend an enjoyable hour Sunday night at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle, it is Hope's full-gospel center.

FIRST METHODIST
Fred R. Harrison, Pastor

Sunday marks the close of the conference year, as the Pastor will leave Tuesday for annual conference at Camden.

Every member is urged to attend all the services Sunday. At the morning congregational worship, the pastor will use as his subject, "If I Had Just One Sermon to Preach."

The subject at the evening service will be, "Making Religion Real." The church school, with classes for all age groups, will meet at 10 a. m. The Intermediate and Young People's Epworth Leagues will meet at 6:30 p. m.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH
W. R. Hamilton, Pastor

"Happiness, Purity and a Vision of God" is the subject of the Sunday morning sermon. This service opens at 10:55.

Sunday school, opening at 9:45, affords an opportunity to an increasing enrollment of men, women, boys, and girls to engage in the study of the Word of Life. As compared with an average attendance in October of 342, the attendance last Sunday was 381. Colder weather should lead the necessary zest to "bring out" an even larger number next Sunday.

"The Gibraltar of the Gospel" will be the pastor's sermon subject at the 7:30 service Sunday night.

Baptist Training Union meets at 6:30. A cordial invitation is extended the public to attend all services at First Baptist church.

Attention is called to the public showing of "Mediterranean Borderlands" in the auditorium of First Baptist church next Thursday night at 8:00 p. m. This religious motion picture travelogue will be found to be "exceptional, educational, entertaining." Spend ninety happy minutes viewing this picture and hearing the pastor's rapid-fire description of the scenes which are pictured. Admission free.

UNITY BAPTIST
E. S. Ray, Pastor
W. O. W. Hall, S. Main St.

Sunday school at 10 o'clock. Preaching 11 a. m., subject "Gideon at Work." Evening services: Singing at 7. Preaching at 8, subject, "Gideons Followers Tested." The public is invited to attend these services and don't forget the location, Woodman hall, South Main street, over City Cafe.

That Old Man Winter Is Here Again

Italy's 'World's Largest' Tuberculosis Sanatorium

Italy presses the war against the "white plague" with a great new tuberculosis sanatorium high in the Italian Alps, where mountain air, sunlight and the most modern scientific equipment will help 3000 fight the disease. U. S. Is Arming since the World war that was to end them. But now the rate of increase is dizzying speed, especially since Germany threw off the Versailles restrictions in 1935 and Japan withdrew from naval limitations in 1936.

To illustrate this increase, it is estimated that between 1931 and 1937 world armament expenses jumped from four billions a year to ten. Today this staggering cost is some where between 14 and 18 billions for 1938—estimates vary. But it is at least six times pre-World war armament costs.

On this precarious and unsound base, Europe has built a feverish industrial revival, an illusion of prosperity. The failure of disarmament is one of the great tragedies that followed the World war. Defeated Germany and Austria-Hungary were disarmed and ordered to stay so. The victorious Allies promoted to follow.

But Russia, the new socialist state, grew rapidly into a militarism beyond anything Czarist Russia had dreamed of. Forced to organize great armies to defend itself after the revolution, the Bolshevik regime soon found that a great army fitted with its plans for education and co-ordination the masses. Today it has potential reserves of 19,000,000 men, the world's largest at hand tank forces, and spends more than $5,000,000,000 a year (almost five times the U. S. cost) on arms.

France saw, in maintaining military strength, her best chance to keep on top in Europe, and never disarmed after the war to any extent. Britain lagged, but the rise of a new military power in Fascist Italy kept the mounting. New nations like Poland and Czechoslovakia, and revamped countries like Turkey, Hungary and Yugoslavia sought prestige and security in military strength.

Then when Germany cast off the treaty restrictions and leaped with a rush back to her old military prominence, all bounds were broken. In the Czech crisis, 2,000,000 soldiers of three countries stood to arms in mere preliminary mobilizations. The naval rivalry between Great Britain and Germany was one of the causes of the World war. The German navy was scuttled in 1919. Britain had no rival at sea, because the United States fleet, roughly her equal, was not considered a rival.

At Washington in 1921, at Geneva and Rome, and at London in 1930, effort after effort was made to keep the international naval race within bounds. Britain an dthe United States made real sacrifices in ships built, building, and projected to hold down their race. But none of the plans brought a permanent solution.

One by one the limitations went by the boards, and today the way is wide open toward unrestricted naval armaments. The recent development of the fleets of the air into more than a mere auxiliary to land and naval forces, into a striking force of its own which many believe might be decisive, has put a new face on the whole problem.

The United States faces a different that the party would continue to oppose policies it considered injurious. He cautioned the Republicans who were elected on Tuesday to "show some restraint," saying they had not been "commissioned to tear the hell out of everything in sight."

Many believed the result depended upon Mr. Roosevelt's own interpretation of what the election meant, and his own decision as to what course he would follow. He could seek compromise and co-operation, or fight it out for two years.

Slim Andrews Is Featured in Show

Davis-Brunk Shows to Open Here for Week's Engagement

Featuring a new star, "Musical Slim" Andrews, an Ozark boy, who is perfect at the art of mimicry, the Davis-Brunk Comedians, one of the very best shows ever to show in this section, will open a week's engagement in Hope, Monday night, November 14, in their heated tent theatre which will be located on the corner of Fifth and Elm.

The new star is unusually talented. He plays more different kinds of musical instruments than the manager of the show could remember, and is extremely versatile. His acts will furnish more rib-tickling laughs than all the clowns in most circuses. To say that he is a perfect comedian is putting it mildly.

The show comes to Hope this year with a company of 21 people and with the best players and casts that have appeared here in years. The opening play, Monday night, entitled "When Ladies Meet" is full of comedy. "Slim Andrews" as the buller is a knockout and will wow the large audience expected to attend. Peggy Lanham and Wade Hays, two very clever tap dancers, and Dick and Madge Danham, xylophone players, have turned in excellent performances that always please their audiences. Jessie Lee and Lucille Kensey add beauty and feminine charm to capable acting to do credit in the feminine leads. The plot especially thrilling, deftly unfolds toward the final triumph of the hero.

And then there's that old war horse of the stage, L. P. (Personality) Davis, himself who plays characters. His Prescott audiences will remember him to be one of the most capable actors ever before seen, having appeared here with Brunks Comedians, Paul English players and Hila Morgan's show.

The Davis-Brunk shows are particularly impressive because of the fact that they are the type the entire family can be taken to see. The management's motto, "a laugh without a blush," is always exercised.

No Additional Labor Needed in 2 States

The Arkansas State Employment Service has a letter from Mr. Lewis Irvine, State Employment Director of Arizona, which states that they now have sufficient labor to harvest the present crop of cotton and that no additional labor will be needed in that state. The Employment Service also has a letter from Mr. O. D. Hollenback, Director of Farm Placement Service, which states that the same condition is true in California.

Arkansas farm labor is advised not to go to either of these states seeking work for the probability is that no work can be secured upon arrival.

Get Comforting Relief from RUNNY HEAD COLDS

DO THIS: Put some Vicks VapoRub up each nostril and sniff well back. NEXT, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water; breathe in the medicated vapors for several minutes. This loosens phlegm and further clears the air-passages.

AT BEDTIME, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, and back so its long-continued double action can relieve the misery of the cold while you sleep.

TRY IT—then you'll know why VapoRub is a standby in 3 out of 5 homes.

Porkers Crippled for SMU Contest

Coach Thomsen Leaves With Smallest Squad of Season

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Twenty eight University of Arkansas Razorbacks left Thursday for Dallas, where they close their 1938 Southwest Conference season against the Southern Methodist University Mustangs Saturday afternoon.

Coach Matty Bell will place an SMU eleven on the field that hasn't met conference defeat in two games played.

Coach Fred C. Thomsen is taking his smallest traveling squad of the season to Dallas, but the Porkers have too many injured performers to do otherwise. Halfback Kay Eakin, with a broken collarbone; end Bill Sutherland, with a broken arm; Fullback Estes McDonald, with a broken bone in his hand; Guard Howard Herr, with a broken bone in his foot, and Guard W. B. Owen, with a wrenched knee, stayed here. Eakin has been an outstanding triple-threat star, Sutherland has been the best pass receiver and Owen the leading guard reserve during the season.

Arkansas has lost four of five conference decisions.

Razorbacks who made the trip were ends, Howard Hickey, Maurice Britt, John Frieberger, Zack Smith, Paul Zuber, tackles, Dudley Mays, Jan Carter, Randall Stallings, Bob Stout, Saul Singer, Newman Miller, guards, Wilfred Thorpe, Milt Simington, Sam Parker, Cecil Johnson, A. J. Yates; centers, Lloyd Woodell, Zeylon Holly; backs, Ralph Atwood, Goyd Lyon, Ray Cole, Neil Martin, Frank Mosley, F. G. Larmore, Walter Hamberg, Marion Fletcher, A. E. Mitchell, and Joe Scalet.

Reddies Win First Contest of Season

March 64 Yards in Final Quarter to Defeat Hendrix, 7 to 0

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—Henderson defeated Hendrix, 7 to 0, in a hard fought game here Thursday afternoon. The Reddies out-gained and out-passed the Warriors. Their touchdown came at the end of a 64-yard drive down the field.

It was the second meeting of the two teams. Hendrix defeated Henderson, 6 to 0, at Conway early in the season. When Floyd Sturgis cracked the Hendrix line in fourth down for a scant one foot, he clinched the march that started on the Reddies' 36-yard line, a march in which he and Ralph James led the attack.

The third quarter had just started when Hendrix recovered a fumble in midfield and drove to the Henderson 36. Lacking inches, the Warriors tried to make first down and failed. The ball went over to the Reddies on their 36.

Sturgis circled Hendrix left end for 13 yards. James added six and Sturgis three. Then James drove three for a first down, taking the ball to the Hendrix 36. James tore through for 25 yards, taking the ball to the Hendrix 11. Sturgis and James, on short gains, barely completed a first down on the Hendrix one-yard line. Here the Warriors rallied and threw back three drives, but Sturgis found an opening on the fourth down and dove through for the score. Bunce kicked goal.

Members of the Presbyterian church met Monday night at the church for a review of a Home Mission study book "City Shadows" by Robert W. Searle. D. D. Mrs. Lee Holt, secretary, presided at the meeting which opened with the hymn, "More Love to Thee." Dr. J. C. Williams read the Scripture lesson and led in prayer. Then the review was given with the following parts: "Juvenile delinquency," by Mrs. Lee Holt; "Kidd day church school," by Mrs. W. H. Etter; "The slums," by Mrs. J. M. May; Gospel to Foreign speaking groups," by J. B. Muldrow; "Fair treatment for the underprivileged," by Mrs. Evelyn Hubbard and "The obligation of Christian people to those who face adversity," Mrs. J. A. Wilson. A free will offering for Home Missions was taken and their meeting closed with the benediction.

Judy leaped to her feet. Her face was stinging with color. "I'm sorry I haven't succeeded in explaining to you," she said. "I'll go."

Judy walked toward the door, her head high. She would not stand here another moment, listening to this spoiled, arrogant girl who trod over other people's feelings with all the hard assurance that her millions gave her.

MARVEL said, "You can run away, if you like, but that doesn't change anything! I'm leaving not so much because he was ordered to sea, but because from the moment I stepped off that airplane I knew the truth! He's been going out with you. You're in love with him, and you hate me. Well, I give him to you, do you hear? I'm going, and I'm never coming back. Let him marry you! Let him stay in the Navy and be poor and go to sea and do all the other grubby, stupid things you Navy people do! Naval society!" She laughed shrilly. "You're dandy, and you're dumb, and he's blind! Blind! I wanted to give him a chance. He could have gone to Washington—had a real career—"

She was shouting now, defiantly screaming because the call of the Navy that she could not understand had triumphed over her own power.

Judy said tightly, "I'm sorry you've insulted me, Miss Hastings, but I quite understand. As for being in love with me—it is you Dwight is engaged to marry, not me!"

"Because he's smart!" Marvel said furiously, "But use he knows that money could open the way for him."

"You're mistaken," said Judy. "He happens to love you."

Marvel screamed, "Did he tell you to tell me that, too? Oh, that's very funny! He sends you here, after God knows how many hours of lovemaking, to tell me that he loves me! Well, you can go back and tell him I'm through! I'm not the fool he takes me for! I'm going to Los Angeles and I hope I never see him again!"

CHAPTER V

SHE got into her car, and drove to the Coronado Hotel. She asked at the desk for Miss Hastings, and was told that her suite was on the fifth floor.

"Suite!" said Judy to herself. "She would have a suite!"

She rapped on the door twice. Then there was the sound of someone moving, and in another moment Marvel's voice came. "Who is it?"

"It's Judy Alcott. May I come in?"

The door was flung open. Marvel in gold satin pajamas, her red hair a fiery glory of curls, stood there. Her face was cold, unfriendly. Behind her Judy saw a hotel maid folding a black cloud of tulle. An evening dress. There was an open steamer trunk, with a drawer pulled out, and clothes on the hangers.

Judy stepped into the room, closing the door behind her. Marvel's face did not change. She simply stood there, waiting. It was not going to be easy. Judy felt the beat of her pulse in her wrists, and a strange little dizziness behind her eyes. Why should she be the one to argue with Marvel on Dwight's account? It was no affair of hers. And yet she had promised. And she would promise anything, she knew, hating herself, when it was Dwight's slightly husky, altogether thrilling voice that asked her.

"Dwight telephoned me," Judy said, walking to a soft chair and sitting down. Marvel moved across the room, took the bench before the vanity table. Her reflection in the mirror made whom Judy had to face. Judy went on, steadily. "He asked me to come here. He said you weren't accustomed to the Navy's disconcerting habit of ordering people off to sea. He simply had to go. Duty. There was no way out. The skipper's wife—Mrs. Lane—telephoned me, too. She said she couldn't come tonight, and told me probably no one else would come."

She leaned forward. "Oh, Miss Hastings, I know how you feel."

CAST OF CHARACTERS

JUDY ALCOFF—admiral's daughter. She faced a choice between two navy suitors.

DWIGHT CAMPBELL—ambitious lieutenant. He faced a choice between his wife and duty.

JACK HASTING—navy sailor. He faced a test of a painful love.

MARVEL HASTING—navy wife. She faced the test of being a good sailor.

Yesterday, Marvel arrives and soon after the ship goes out, leaving Judy to explain to Marvel why Dwight could not be with her.

You've just gotten in. You want to be with him. You feel as though he could have managed to stay with you. But I know better. In the Navy, no one counts. It's only duty—why, I've known men whose wives were in the hospitals, having babies—"

But Marvel's eyes did not soften. She said, in a cool little voice, "He could have stayed if he had really wanted to."

"No, no. He couldn't! You don't understand!"

Marvel said, "I understand well enough! Surely it's not a matter of life and death—not a matter of national emergency!"

IT HADN'T been a matter of national emergency that night the Enterprise steamed out to sea. There, just a routine flight. But Bill Bell had gone, and Diane had not whimpered. Judy's fingers closed up, and she said, "But it's duty. They were ordered to sea—no one has the choice of staying, don't you see?"

"No," said Marvel. "No, I don't see."

"But you must! Dwight begged me to explain! He was so sure you'd understand!"

Marvel stood up. Her green eyes flashed. "It was very good of my fiancé to ask another girl—a girl he's been as friendly with as he has been with you—to come here and soothe me. But I will not be soothed, do you understand? I'm not accustomed to being kept waiting for any one! Least of all for a man! He knew I was coming, he might have arranged things so that I would not be left alone like this. He didn't think it was important enough, that's all! I won't put up with it, I don't have to!"

She looked at the maid, who was now carrying an armful of silken lingerie from a dresser drawer. "I'm packing, as you can see. Tell that to Dwight when he comes back! Tell him I've left! I'll never stand for this kind of treatment! I'm going to Los Angeles. I have friends there, and afterward—I'll go home again!"

"But Miss Hastings—you can't do that! It's not fair to Dwight! He didn't leave you deliberately. He had to go. You mustn't act as if it were a personal choice, as if he wanted to hurt you—"

MARVEL's eyes were on Judy's face with a queer, steady scrutiny. Judy could feel the blood coming up in her cheeks. "Just what business is this of yours, anyway?" Marvel asked with deliberate rudeness.

"Dwight asked me to come here. That's all," Judy bit her lip. Marvel laughed, a soft, un-

Red Cross Gray Ladies Bring Cheer to Disabled Soldiers

Red Cross Gray Ladies provide small comforts and recreational program for disabled veterans and service men.

SECOND only to its work for the relief of victims of disaster is the Red Cross program of service to disabled veterans and men in the regular armed forces of the nation.

During the past year, Red Cross Chapters and the liaison representatives of the national Red Cross, aided in solving the family problems of 222,000 veterans or their families, and also extended friendly help to 35,000 men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

This Red Cross program, an outgrowth of World War service, and part of the Red Cross chartered responsibility, is carried on by Home Service secretaries in Chapters; through liaison representatives with Veterans Administration regional offices; through medical social service workers in hospitals; through field directors in Army posts and Navy yards; by the Gray Ladies, a volunteer, trained group who distribute comforts and aid in recreational projects; and through the Junior Red Cross which makes gifts for the disabled.

One of the chief benefits of the Red Cross service is the assistance given to the veteran and service man in obtaining benefits due him under the law, and in support of his dependents pending such claims, or while he is in the hospital.

Blytheville, Jonesboro Ready for Annual Game

BLYTHERVILLE, Ark.—The Blytheville High School Chicks were on edge Thursday night on the eve of their game with the Jonesboro Hurricanes here Friday night.

Coach Diddy put the Chicks through their final workout and indicated that he was satisfied with their condition. The players pledged themselves to stop Jonesboro's eight-game winning streak.

Arrangements were completed for seating between 4,000 and 5,000 fans, including several hundred supporters of the Hurricanes.

Homecoming Day ceremonies in which Miss Elaine Anderson will be crowned queen will be held at the field a few minutes before the kick-off, and between halves there will be performances by bands and pep squads representing each school. Queen Elaine will be attended by Gloria Martin, Mary Ann Nabors, Anita Fay Beck, Martha Nell Kyle, Churchill Buck and Mary Adah Robinson.

Jonesboro End to Play
JONESBORO, Ark.—Howard Barringer, 195-pound end, plans to disregard doctor's orders to rest this week because of a leg injury and play for Jonesboro High School against the Blytheville Chicks at Blytheville Friday night. Drills were lightened by Coach Lowell Manning Thursday.

A special train will leave here at 4:30 p. m. Friday for Blytheville with several hundred fans aboard.

Fatalities in Grid Games Show Decline
LAFAYETTE, Ind.—(AP)—Football fatalities, in high school, college sandlot and athletic club games show a decrease for the second straight year, according to a preliminary report issued Thursday by Dr. Floyd R. Eastwood of Purdue University, who makes an annual survey of gridiron vital statistics for the American Football Coaches Association and the NCAA.

Fourteen deaths directly attributable to football and five indirectly due to football have been recorded through November 7. Last year, for the same period, there were 16 deaths for which football was directly responsible.

Cerebral hemorrhage, with skull fractures and internal injuries, was found by Dr. Eastwood to be one of the chief causes of death.

Seventeen fatalities were reported from high schools, four from sandlots and two from athletic clubs.

Which is why we elect to tell you about the bachelor breakfast tendered at 5 o'clock in the morning last week for Jack, the amiable fellow who guards the entrance at the Stork Club. Jack was getting married at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. His working hours end at 4 a. m. So almost every important columnist you could name and at least ten moneyed patrons of the Stork got together to give this merry tribute to Jack at the only available time.

It was quite a party. It wound up at 8 and the honored headwaiter went through the material ceremony with half-shut lids.

The stewards were horrified when she looked at it. "My!" she exclaimed. "Why the wooden leg, Mr. Huston?"

"Well," replied the popular actor, "I'm going to New York and never know what might happen in the big city."
